FALL 2017

OCTOBER MARKS 500TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE REFORMATION

On Sunday, October 29, churches around the world will celebrate the 500th anniversary of the Protestant Reformation. The day commemorates Martin Luther's posting his 95 Theses on the Castle church door in Wittenberg, Germany on October 31, 1517.

At the beginning of the century, most of Europe had been without a Bible they could read for about a thousand years. Common thought was that salvation could be earned. People worked at goodness, but had no assurance of salvation. It was, in fact, considered presumptuous to claim assurance.

Luther, a monk at the Black Monastery in Wittenberg, struggled with uncertainty. The writer of a Britannica article describes Luther's pre-conversion life:

Despite the most punctilious performance of the minutiae of the rule of his order, the most rigorous asceticism, he had hitherto failed to find peace of conscience, the assurance of acceptance in the sight of God, and he had been periodically harassed by doubts on the score of his personal salvation.

He describes Luther's temperament as "high-strung, emotional, impressionable, and liable to fits of depression. He had a sensitive conscience and a keen sense of sin." Efforts to abide by the rules of his order only intensified his guilt. With no real hope of heaven, he was terrified of death and shrieked with fear when caught in a thunderstorm and nearly struck by lightning.

During the winter of 1512 to 1513, Luther's spirit was awakened as he meditated on Romans 1:16-17:

For I am not ashamed of the Gospel, for it is the power of God for salvation to everyone who believes, to the Jew first and also to the Greek. For in it the righteousness of God is revealed from faith to faith; as it is written, "But the righteous man shall live by faith."

He wrote of the experience: "I felt that I was altogether born again and had entered Paradise itself through open gates."

Luther's writing of the 95 Theses was largely in protest of the selling and buying of indulgences. Individuals bought their way out of doing penance, hoped for remission of sins, or interceded for souls in purgatory, while the papal treasury grew. Luther sought to distinguish between true repentance and simply doing penance.

He and other reformers embraced the doctrines of sola scriptura, Scripture alone, or the Bible as the final authority; and sola fide, faith alone, or justification by faith. The revolution of faith was intensified by the invention of the Gutenberg Press in the previous century, making possible the rapid distribution of God's Word.
